OFFICER REPORTS TO CITY COUNCIL

Sanitary Inspector George Wolfe Finds Many Violation of the Garbage Ordinance.

NOTICES HAVE BEEN ISSUED

Use of Standard Container is Recommended—Reported Second Ward In Best Sanitary Condition.

Sanitary Officer George Wolfe has completed his inspection of the city with reference to the garbage condition and finds that there is ample room for improvement according to his report filed with the city council. Several weeks have been required to complete the inspection and his report reveals some startling conditions. Practically every lot in the city was visited by the inspector.

The report states that there have been several complaints that the garbage hauler had not taken away the refuse, but upon investigation it was found that the fault was with the property owners in more cases than with the garbage hauler. The city ordinance provides that the garbage shall be free of ashes, tin cans, glass or other trash, but in a number of places it was found that the ordinance was not complied with by the property owners.

Officer Wolfe stated in his report that at a few places he found dead rats and dead cats in the garbage containers, and at any number of places the garbage was mixed with ashes, glass and tin cans. The garbage hauler is not expected to remove refuse when found in this condition, and the persons who place ashes and other trash with the garbage are violating the city ordinance. The inspector has kept a record of the places where the ordinance is not complied with and notices have been sent to the persons with instructions as to how it should be kept.

The report states that various kinds of containers were used, and in many places the garbage was placed in baskets which soon decayed and the hauler found it impossible to remove it. The city health board recommends that garbage be placed in tin cans which are properly covered as this is the most satisfactory way of keeping it.

The report also states that several complaints have been made by the ash hauler, but an investigation shows that where such complaints were made the ordinance was not complied with and the ashes and other refuse were thrown in with the garbage and as result neither the ash hauler nor the garbage hauler could take them. In the ashes were found glass, grapevines, feathers and all kinds of other rubbish.

Inspector Wolfe made a trip over the city with the garbage hauler and all the rubbish was removed. At a number of places it was found that the property owners had told the city hauler not to remove the ashes or garbage as they were taken away by other persons and the complaints were made when the parties failed to come after the rubbish.

In this report Officer Wolfe says that the Second ward is in the best sanitary condition of any ward in the city. Notices will be given to property owners to comply with the ordinance and a request made to keep the garbage in containers such as suggested by the board of health.

COUNCIL MEETING

Little Business Transacted at Session Thursday Night.

Little business was transacted at the regular session of the city council Thursday evening. There was only a quorum present, Misch, Taskey and W. R. Day being absent. Mayor Allen Swope presided.

Council Hodapp stated that the alley at the rear of the interurban station needed cleaning and upon his motion the street commissioner was ordered to do the work. Sherman Day reported that there was some stone on the street and it was ordered that the owners remove the same.

The claim of John Grime for $2.70 for plumbing which was presented some time ago, was allowed.

The other claims were allowed as follows:

HEAD STONES OVERTURNED

By Cows That Are Pastured in the City Cemetery.

Complaints have been made recently that a few persons living in the vicinity of the city cemetery have been using the burying ground as a pasture for their cows. The question was taken up at the council meeting Thursday night, and Chief of Police Abell was instructed to notify such persons that the cemetery could not be used as a pasture and that the cows must not be chained on that ground.

It is said that some damage has been done by the cows as some of them were tied to the tombstones and in walking around several of the head stones and monuments have been overturned and a few broken.

There is a storm of indignation against the pasturing of cows in the cemetery, and while the grounds are not kept in the best condition, the public is opposed to making such use of it as this. The cemetery at the present time is under the direction of the council, but the lots are owned by individuals who believe that their rights should be properly protected.

It is not believed that much trouble will be experienced after the orders are given by Chief of Police Abell.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services of the late Meredith Bland will be conducted from the Methodist church at Brownstown, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Edward F. Schneider officiating.

RURAL DISTRICTS ARE BENEFITTED

Consolidated School System Serves a Great Purpose in Economic Life of the State.

GREATHOUSE GIVES VIEWS

Says Land Values Have Increased With The Adoption of New System—Center of Social Life.

Many of the farmers in Jackson county are giving considerable attention to the consolidated school system and believe that it should be more generally adopted. In several townships it has been proposed that the school be consolidated and petitions have been circulated, but no definite steps have been taken to combine them. The people living in the vicinity of the consolidated school in Jackson township are more than satisfied with the results obtained with the system and find that it means much for rural life.

Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction finds that the system is a benefit to the community and that it has served a great purpose in the economic life of the state. In his report which will be published in a short time Mr. Greathouse has the following to say about consolidated schools.

"The people of the rural districts are entitled to just as good school facilities as are the people of any city," Mr. Greathouse says. "Without consolidation they can not realize the possibilities to which they are entitled. With consolidation they can have schools as good as the best."

"In the rural districts, consolidation has made it imperative for the school authorities to provide new buildings. These buildings are modern and built in compliance with the sanitary building law. They usually contain four to eight recitation rooms well lighted halls and basements equipped for manual training and cooking. Some of the buildings have basements equipped for playrooms during the rainy and cold weather. Many of these buildings are as well equipped as the best buildings of our smaller cities."

"From an economic point of view it has been demonstrated that it is cheaper to build and keep up one four-room building than to build and keep up four one-room buildings or eight one-room buildings."

"These schools are the centers of township social life. The people of the community use these buildings for school entertainments and lecture courses and as a result the community pride brings about a better attitude toward the school and consequently better financial support."

"When the community gets in the habit of using these buildings for community centers, it is natural that they wish to reach the buildings with as much convenience as possible, consequently these consolidated buildings are the ultimate cause of better roads."

"It has also been demonstrated that in the communities where consolidated schools have been estab-

DEMOCRATS MAKE RUSH FOR THE PIE

Leaders of the Party in Seymour Get Bids in For Some of the Best Political Plums.

SEVERAL AFTER POSTOFFICE

Congressman Dixon Who Makes Appointment Finds Out How Popular He is Among Local Democrats.

Since the smoke of the recent political battle has cleared away, the local democratic politicians and party workers are looking around for the available jobs which will be distributed by the office holders in reward for services rendered. There are any number of democrats in Seymour and Jackson county who are anxious for a government position that pays a good salary and all the available space around the political pie counter is crowded with office seekers. It will probably be some time, however, before the jobs are distributed, as the word has gone out that the successful candidates will take their own time in making the appointments.

Considerable interest centers upon the postoffice in this city and there are a number of democrats who desire the place of postmaster and quite a few others who are in a receptive frame of mind.

The appointment is left almost entirely to Lincoln Dixon, congressman from the Fourth district, and it is said that Mr. Dixon is receiving all sorts of nice letters from aspirants for this office. It was probably not until this time that Mr. Dixon knew that there were so many democrats in Seymour who were working so hard for his success.

Among the names of the local men who would like to connect with the postoffice is City Treasurer C. W. Burkart. It is said that he has the endorsement of quite a number of the prominent democratic leaders in the county and that when his application is filed with Congressman Dixon the latter will be informed of the great service which Mr. Burkart has done for democracy in Jackson county. He was engaged in the newspaper work in Seymour for a quarter of a century, is a member of the county committee and has worked unceasingly night and day for the success of his party and believes that he is entitled to recognition with one of the largest political plums the party can give him.

Another democrat who has an eye on the post office is Dr. H. R. Kyte, who also believes that he is entitled to a generous slice of political pie. Harry M. Miller and C. S. Mercer would also take the position without much pleading. The name of Mayor Allen Swope has been mentioned in this connection, and it is reported that if he can make satisfactory arrangements regarding his private business affairs he will file an application for the place.

It is said that a number of the lesser lights of the democratic party, who recognize that their chances for the post office are hardly worth the effort, are building their fences so that they can land positions as clerks, carriers and rural carriers. Some of them apparently forget that all the positions in the post office with the exception of the postmaster, are under civil service and the present employees can not be discharged unless they neglect their duty or other charges are proven against them. Under the civil service law politics must be eliminated absolutely from the selection of employees.

DEPUTY PROSECUTOR

And County Attorney Will be Appointed in Short Time.

Democratic attorneys in Seymour are interested in two appointments which will be made within the next two months. One of the appointments will be that of deputy prosecuting attorney and the other county attorney.

Oscar Abel, of this city, is the deputy prosecutor under Noble Hays, but the newly elected prosecutor, John H. Underwood, of Bedford, will likely select a new deputy. F. W. Wesner is slated for the place, according to the rumors which are being circulated. It is understood that Mr. Wesner has just a tight cinch on the place that the other attorneys are making no fight for the position. Oren O. Swails, who was elected judge of the district, is county attorney and as soon as he takes his place on the bench it will be necessary to make an appointment for this position. Albert Kasting, Seba A. Barnes and Oscar Abel have been mentioned, but nothing definitely has been decided upon at this time. The appointment of the county attorney is left with the county commissioners.

CHAUTAUQUA MEETING

Stockholders Urged to Be Present This Evening.

The stockholders and persons interested in the chautauqua are requested to be present at the organization meeting at the city building this evening. The details of the organization have been completed and final action will be taken tonight. It is desired that all the stockholders be present in order to vote upon the questions which will be presented at the meeting.

The officers are especially desirous of having a large number of ladies present at this meeting. The success of the chautauqua will depend largely upon the support given the movement by the ladies of the city and various women's clubs. A number have already agreed to assist in the work and are asked to attend the meeting tonight. This will be the most important meeting held up to this time and several questions of much concern will be determined.

Miss Mary C. Bruner Dead.

Miss Mary C. Bruner died at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. John H. Wohrer one and one-half miles west of Hayden. She had been an invalid for seven years. She was fifty years of age. Miss Bruner was born near Hayden and lived in that vicinity all her life. The remains will be taken to Louisville Saturday for burial.

Merit Will Tell.

A half century ago in a Massachusetts town Rice & Hutchins commenced in a small way to make shoes, good shoes, good shoes only. They put their name on them and stood back of them. The people bought and found they got better service than they had been getting—Result constant patronage. Presently they had to enlarge their factory in order to turn out more shoes for which they had found a demand, this demand increased until today they operate eight large factories making shoes for every member of the family. The people are so used to being cheated that when they find an honest man they make him rich. Rice & Hutchins became rich and the business they founded is of the greatest in history.

SON CHARGED WITH MURDER OF FATHER

Dr. A. A. Staurt, Well Known Physician of Hancock County Shot Down at His Home.

SOFT BLACK HAT IS FOUND

Young Man is Seemingly Unconcerned About Arrest and Refused to Make Statement to Police.

Fortville, Ind., November 8.—Guy Stuart is in jail at Greenfield on a charge of murdering his father, Dr. A. A. Stuart, in this town, at 8:30 o'clock last night. The son is twenty-two and one of the best known physicians in this community.

There is considerable mystery in the case as far as the motive for the tragedy is concerned. The father, while dying, insisted that it could not have been his son who did the shooting.

The only clue to the murderer is a soft black hat that was found near the body of Dr. Stuart. It was bought at the Williams store here. One theory is that the murder was committed by a burglar. Dr. Stuart said, as he was dying, that he heard a noise in the lower part of the house and picking up a hatchet went down stairs to make an investigation. He said as he reached the rear porch he saw a tall man running through the yard. Dr. Stuart called to the man to stop and he turned and fired and Dr. Stuart fell.

Young Stuart wore a light cap when he appeared on the streets after the tragedy. He was told his father was dying and was taken home by the deputy marshals. He stood by his father's bedside for a moment and then walked from the room. He displayed no emotion and made no comment.

REMODELING BUILDING

Modern New Front Being Built at The Bee Hive.

The building at the corner of Second and Chestnut street occupied by the Bee Hive is being remodeled and repaired and when the work is completed it will be one of the most modern buildings on the block. The front will be changed and display windows will be built. The entrance will be in the center several feet from the side walk. The stone columns which support the second story will be removed and a large iron cross beam will be placed across the front of the building. A display window will also be built on Chestnut street.

The proprietors of the store, Klein & Wolter, will make several changes in the interior of the building. The stock will be completely rearranged so that it can be displayed to the best advantage. The improvements will be completed as soon as possible so that all the changes can be made before the holiday rush. The store has enjoyed an excellent business and the stock has been greatly increased during the past year.

WILSON TAKES ILLINOIS VOTE

That State Lifted From the Roosevelt Column.

TAFT VOTE ALSO IS REDUCED

Later Returns Take Wyoming From the President's Scant Proportion and Give It to His Democratic Opponent—Besides Having Overwhelming Majority in House, Democrats Now Seem Certain of Controlling Senate.

New York, Nov. 8.—Woodrow Wilson carried forty states and will have 442 electoral votes, according to fuller returns. This leaves Roosevelt second with five states and 77 electoral votes, while President Taft has but three with twelve votes to be cast for him. More complete returns took Illinois from Roosevelt and added its twenty-seven votes to the Wilson column, while dispatches from Cheyenne declare that Wilson has carried Wyoming by a small plurality, which takes three out of the previous Taft column. This apparently final line-up gives Idaho, Utah and Vermont to Taft and Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Washington to Roosevelt, Wilson taking the remainder of the states.

The Democrats appear reasonably certain of controlling the United States senate, although it will be very close. The Republicans had a majority of seven in the present session, with three vacancies. While the Democrats have held their own in their states, the indications are that they have taken two seats away from the Republicans in Colorado, one in Delaware, one in New Jersey, one in Kansas, and one in Montana. They may win one in Nevada, while Democrats believe there are chances in Oregon, Tennessee, Iowa and South Dakota. In Illinois the United States senator will have to be elected by a coalition, as the Progressives and three Socialist members of the lower house will hold the balance between the two parties.

Later returns have developed the defeat of three very well known Republican congressmen, Joseph G. Cannon, William B. McKinley and Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt, but a Taft supporter.

With fewer than 300 districts to hear from in Illinois, Wilson led by 7,000, and the Democratic leaders anticipate 10,000 on complete returns. Dunne, the successful Democratic candidate for governor, will have 100,000 at least. Of the twenty-seven congressmen from Illinois, eighteen will be Democratic, three Progressive and six Republican. It is likely that the present Illinois legislature will claim the right of electing a successor to Lorimer, and efforts are being made to get all factions to agree on some Republican, preferably Lawrence Y. Sherman, who defeated Shelby M. Culom in the preferential primaries.

In California, with 200 districts to be heard from, Wilson's plurality was 1,000, but it was expected to increase to between 3,000 and 4,000. In Kansas revised returns give the state to Wilson by about 12,000, while Governor Stubbs for the United States senate has been defeated by Thompson Democrat, by the same figures. A further development was that the New Hampshire legislature will be Republican on joint ballot.

The next Delaware legislature will have twenty Democrats and twenty-three Republicans. In Massachusetts the Democrats have added the secretary of state to their winning list, the post being won by Frank J. Donoghue, a young newspaper man. The legislature will be Republican on joint ballot on 54 plurality.

There are indications that Nebraska will send a Republican senator to Washington. Safe returns indicate the success of Norris. The legislature will be Republican on joint ballot, but nothing has been received to change the result of the national election or of the victory of Moorehead, Democrat, for governor.

Ernest Lister, Democrat, is probably elected governor of Washington, but complete count may be necessary to decide.

POLITICAL MEDLEY

The Three Leading Parties All Able to Score in Michigan.

Detroit, Nov. 8.—The unofficial count shows the election of Ferris, Democrat, as governor of Michigan by a plurality of 10,000. Roosevelt carried the state by 23,000. The Republicans have elected eight congressmen, the Democrats two, and the Progressives two. Woman suffrage carried by about 7,000 majority. It is probable that a Progressive will occupy the lieutenant governor's chair. The state officers are still in doubt, but the Democrats will probably be well represented among them. The state legislature will probably have a scant Republican majority on joint ballot, which will return William Alden Smith to the senate.

Uncle Joe Finally Beaten.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 8.—Joseph G. Cannon, for nearly forty years Republican congressman from the Eighth Illinois congressional district, has been defeated by Frank T. O'Hair, a young attorney of Paris. Cannon was defeated by about 1,000 votes.

INDIANA VOTE ABOUT ALL IN

Unofficial Returns Make Ralston's Plurality 118,000.

BEVERIDGE AHEAD OF DURBIN

The Democrats, Besides Electing Their Entire State Ticket, Elect All Their Thirteen Candidates For Congress, Ninety-Two of the Hundred Members of the House, and All the Twenty-Five Senators Elected.

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—Including official and unofficial returns, the latest figures on the state ticket in Indiana give Ralston 280,103, Durbin 144,171, and Beveridge 163,946. Ralston's plurality over Beveridge is 117,057; over Durbin 135,103. Beveridge's plurality over Durbin is 18,875.

The latest compilation of the vote of the state for president gives Woodrow Wilson 279,887; President Taft, 151,157; Roosevelt, 160,903, and Debs, 21,135. This gives Wilson an estimated plurality of 118,984 over Roosevelt and over Taft 128,730. Roosevelt's plurality over Taft, 9,746. The lowering of the Wilson vote from the vote given earlier is due to returns from the northern tier of Indiana counties, which were late in reaching Indianapolis.

One of the surprises of the election was the vote polled for Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist candidate for president, in Madison county. Debs received 146 more votes than President Taft, according to the unofficial returns. The vote for president was: Wilson, 6,586; Taft, 1,771; Roosevelt, 4,751; Debs, 1,917. Governor—Ralston, 6,376; Durbin, 1,697; Beveridge, 4,800.

Reports on all except two of the one hundred members of the lower house of the legislature show that the Democrats elected ninety-two members, the Republicans five and the Progressives one, from Wayne county.

The Democrats elected senators in all the twenty-five districts in which elections were held. Of the twenty-five holdover senators fifteen are Democrats.

The representatives in the Indiana legislature elected by Republicans are Stephen Daugherty, in Benton and Warren counties; E. G. Gilmore, in Knox; William Newton, in Lake; W. B. Van Horn, in Lake and Newton, and A. J. Smutzer, in Laporte and Porter.

The Progressives elected one representative, John W. Jenkins, from Wayne county. The Democrats elected their candidates for congress in all the thirteen districts. The Indiana delegation in the next congress will be as follows:

First District—Charles F. Lieb.
Second—William A. Cullop.
Third—William E. Cox.
Fourth—Lincoln Dixon.
Fifth—Ralph W. Moss.
Sixth—Finley H. Gray.
Seventh—Charles A. Korbly.
Eighth—John A. M. Adair.
Ninth—Martin A. Morrison.
Tenth—John Peterson.
Eleventh—George W. Rauch.
Twelfth—Cyrus Cline.
Thirteenth—Henry A. Barnhart.

According to the latest compilations of the vote for Indiana, Beveridge has carried five counties and Durbin three. The counties credited to Beveridge are: Elkhart, Lagrange, Lake, Randolph and Wayne. Durbin carried Porter, Steuben and Warren.

The same returns also indicate that Roosevelt carried five counties and Taft two. The Roosevelt counties are: Elkhart, Lagrange, Lake, Randolph and Wayne, while those credited to Taft are Porter and Warren.

This indication is given from a complete canvass, of which about 50 per cent is officially announced.

IDENTIFIED HIM

Victim of Negro Gunman Sure of Man Who Attacked Her.

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Clara Baxter, who was assaulted and robbed while asleep in a tent on the bank of Fall creek during the state fair, has positively identified Frank Willie Smith, the negro gunman, charged with the murder of Philip Lepper and Frank Foxall, Oct. 2, as her assailant. Mrs. Baxter and her husband, Walter Baxter, are performers and were with a midway attraction at the state fair. Because of the heat at night they camped in a tent near their sleeping car. On the morning of Tuesday of fair week they were found bleeding and unconscious in their tent and $800 worth of diamonds and $45 in money were missing.

Mysterious Murder of Physician.

Fortville, Ind., Nov. 8.—Dr. A. A. Stuart, sixty-two years old, was shot to death in the doorway of his home at 8:30 o'clock last night. The only positive clue to the murder is a soft black hat found near the body of the victim. Guy Stuart, thirty years old, a son, is under arrest, but protests his innocence. The only other theory of the murder is that it was committed by a robber who had entered the home after Dr. Stuart had retired.

President-elect Menocal of Cuba will visit the United States prior to his inauguration.

TURKISH RULE IN EUROPE IS OVER

Nothing Now Can Stay the Victorious Bulgars.

RUSHING ON TO THE CAPITAL

With the Fall of the Last Fort Lying Between the Triumphant Army of King Ferdinand and Constantinople, the Remnant of the Turkish Army in Full Flight, Salonika Taken and Scutari Falling, the End Is in Sight.

Constantinople, Nov. 8.—The war will be fought to a finish. After a conference of the commanders and Marshal Fuad Pasha, the latter returned to Constantinople and submitted his own and the conference view of the situation. He said it was quite unnecessary to despair, and urged the government to resist to the last. Nazim Pasha and the crown prince telegraphed to the same effect. The government, whether it was coerced or persuaded, yielded, and at a meeting of the ambassadors it was announced that the Turkish government no longer desired the offices of the powers.

London, Nov. 8.—The victorious Bulgarians made one swift, vicious assault on the fortifications of Tchataldja and won them. The disheartened Turks are now scattered over the twenty-five mile district between these captured lines of defense and Constantinople, and the Bulgarians are pursuing them, capturing some and killing others. There is now nothing save these disorganized fleeing bands of Turks to stop the Bulgarians in their conquering march toward the capital of their enemies.

Flushed with the increasing total of victories, the Bulgarian troops, under the direction of King Ferdinand, decided that it would not be necessary to await the arrival of the reinforcements which have already started from Sofia. The grating hatred which the Bulgars feel toward the Turks fed fire to the zeal of the soldiers, and after testing the mettle of the defensive army by pressing them hard on Tuesday, Wednesday and yesterday, King Ferdinand decided on one assault. The Turks had been yielding, to his varied attacks during these days, and yesterday afternoon he piled all his forces on top of the Turks in a sweeping assault.

The Turks resisted as best they could, but the soldiers are weak from lack of food, disheartened by defeat, and have endured terrific physical hardships during the few weeks of the war, and at last were pushed from their position. The retreat of the Turks began in confusion, which increased as the Bulgarians pressed home their attacks, and at last the Turks broke into a sprint for their capital, throwing away their packs and arms to increase their speed.

The effect on the porte is that it is hastening its efforts for peace. The cabinet wants it on any terms, provided it is granted quickly. To this end the cabinet decided to give free rein to the powers in arranging for a cessation of hostilities.

The loss of the Tchataldja lines of defense became known in Constantinople just after the war department got news of the surrender of Salonika and news of other Turkish losses throughout European Turkey. Salonika had been making a gallant defense, but the Greeks had been attacking it in so wholesale a manner that it has been known for several days that the Turkish garrison could not withstand it. The Turkish commander would not trust his men to surrender, and his army simply abandoned the town, burning down several bridges to prevent pursuit.

The situation for the Turks defending Scutari against the Montenegrins makes it appear impossible that there is much hope for them.

The situation in Constantinople is growing in desperation every day. Every Christian who can do so is leaving the capital. There are 600,000 Christians in the town normally. Those who know the Turks and the conditions are sure that a general massacre will start, and that thousands of Christians must lose their lives.

One of the Daily Mail's war correspondents has just reached Bucharest from Sofia and telegraphs as follows: "I have grounds for believing that Adrianople has fallen, but the Bulgarians are concealing the fact lest the powers, realizing that a decisive point has been reached in the war, should intervene before the capture of Constantinople. Extraordinary endeavors have been made to prevent the news from getting out. Nothing has been issued officially at Sofia. I understand that the Adrianople garrison, hopelessly encircled by steel and having failed in all the attempted sorties, offered to surrender on condition that the garrison be allowed to march out with the honors of war. This was refused and the bombardment continued. The entire garrison then surrendered unconditionally."

Stepped in Front of Train.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 8.—Harry Miner, aged twenty-one, a Monon brakeman, while flagging a passenger train, stepped off the main track to a side-track and was run over by his own train. He died four hours later in a Lafayette hospital.

lished, the value of land has increased. The expense for teachers is much less. From an economic point of view, a person can not conceive of a more extravagant plan than that of having one teacher-teaching children of all ages, hearing from twenty to thirty recitations a day, with only one, two or three pupils in each class, which frequently occurs in our one-room district schools.

"A pupil should have a great deal of competition in his class work in order to develop the best that is in him. Competition creates enthusiasm, and certainly this is lacking in a class of one or two pupils.

"Better teachers can be secured because of the increased pay, and the increased length of the school term and the work with a smaller number of classes, giving more time for individual work, and an opportunity for enjoying the company and suggestions of several fellow teachers, is stimulating and attractive.

"There is greater possibility of intelligent supervision of teachers, which is not at all practicable among the district schools. In these schools pupils are graded and classified.

"Possibly one of the greatest results accomplished by the consolidated of the rural schools is the establishment of the township high schools. Students, who would not have entered a high school, had they been compelled to leave home, are attending these schools and in most cases, graduate from them. Consolidated has made it possible for the child of the rural district to be under the direct control and high school training. Many children in our consolidated schools, who do not care to even enter a high school while they are working in the grades become interested in the high school work by observing the enthusiasm manifested by their classmates.

"In brief the consolidated school brings to the country community that thing, the absence of which has driven so many boys off the farm, viz., a well classified, well equipped, well taught school. It is no longer necessary for the wealthy farmer to move to town to educate his children, nor is it necessary for him to send his children to boarding schools or to subject his boys and girls to the temptations and moral dangers arising when children are away from their parental care."

Mr. Greathouse declares that the success of the consolidated school depends in very large measure on transportation. If the transportation is safe, comfortable, rapid and in charge of men of high character, no troubles result from it and many of the evils arising from the necessity for transportation can be remedied he asserts.

Council Samuel Hodapp, organizer of the O. O. B. order is making arrangements for the second annual meeting and celebration which will be held some time this month. He says that there are 1,836 members to the order, and since it was organized four years ago only twenty members have lost their membership. The meeting will probably be held in some hall in the city. The first annual celebration was held last year at Fairview cabin and was pronounced by the organizer as one of the greatest successes ever recorded. Mr. Hodapp is in complete control of the order and is the only officer, having initiated every member who now belongs.

FRAIL, SICKLY CHILD

Restored To Health By Vinol—A Letter to Mothers.

Anxious mothers often wonder why their children are so pale, thin and nervous and have so little appetite. For the benefit of such mothers in this vicinity we publish the following letter.

J. Edmund Miller, New Haven, Conn., says: "My little daughter ever since her birth had been frail and sickly, and was a constant source of worry. Several months ago we commenced to give her Vinol. I immediately noted an improvement in her health and appearance, and from the good it has done her I can truly say it will do all you claim."

This child's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements extracted from cods' livers, combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol.

Vinol will build up, and strengthen delicate children, old people, and the weak, run-down and debilitated. We return the money in every case where it fails. The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

GAME LAW DON'TS

For Hunters Who Will Soon Hunt
For Quail.

Hunters of Seymour and vicinity are beginning to oil up the trusties and train the dogs for the season, which formally opens November 10, when the state gives the nimrods the right to go forth and slay the whistling bob white. The open season for wild ducks is now on and duck hunters are already nosing about the nooks and corners of the county with loving but murderous eyes alert for the chief ingredient of a good game dinner. Among the provisions of the game laws are the following:

It is unlawful to kill or possess either dead or alive, at any time, except for breeding purposes, any deer, wild turkey or pheasant, except that owners or private parks may kill deer reared therein.

To net or trap quails at any time, or to possess nets or traps for the purpose of catching them.

To kill or possess more than 45 at any one time, during the open season. To sell or offer for sale, directly or indirectly, any quails at any time.

To kill or possess any waterfowl between sunset of any day and sunrise the following morning.

To pursue any waterfowl with a launch, or any boat except a row boat or push boat.

To kill more than 15 ducks, geese, brants or other water-fowl in any one day, or to possess more than 45 at one time.

To hunt squirrels after the first day of October or before the first day of July.

To hunt woodcocks after the first day of January or before the first day of July.

To hunt any kind of game except water-fowl from October 1st to November 10th.

To kill or injure any prairie chicken, ring-necked or other pheasant or Hungarian partridge at any time.

To hunt within any game preserve, organized and stocked by the commissioner of fisheries and game.

To kill, trap, possess, sell or destroy the nest or eggs of any wild bird excepting game birds, English sparrows, hawks and other birds of prey.

To hunt on any land without first securing permission to do so from the owner or tenant thereof.

THE RESULT AND THE FUTURE.

The election is over and the result has been accepted by every patriotic citizen with the sincere hope that the Democrats, who have been entrusted with such large power, may use it wisely during the next four years.

An analysis of the election figures shows that there was no great Wilson landslide in the country. He has been chosen President by a minority of the voters, yet with such a large plurality because of the division in the Republican party. This fact stands out clearly as the figures are examined. In Indiana, for instance, the Democrats polled 338,262 votes four years ago, this year 279,887. In Illinois four years ago the Democrats polled 450,810, this year 399,428. In Ohio four years ago the Democrats polled 502,721, this year 352,576. These figures show that the Democratic vote in these three states of the middle West are far short of the vote of four years ago,—in Indiana 58,375, Illinois 51,382 and Ohio 150,145. The same results will hold true in a large majority of the other states of the Union, so it is apparent that there was no great popular uprising in favor of Mr. Wilson and the Democratic party.

In these three states the total Democratic vote this year was 1,031,- 891, and the combined votes of the Republicans and Progressives was 1,384,832, leaving the Democrats in the minority over 350,000 in the three states. With a united party opposing them, the Democratic defeat would have been overwhelming throughout the country, based on the vote which they actually polled. It is also clear that the large pluralities are due to the division of the Republicans rather than to any great tidal wave toward Democracy.

The question of the future is yet to be determined, but every thoughtful man will recognize that the Republican party is not dead, but that through its organization under wise leadership the real progressive policies of this country may be worked out and the advancement of the country continued in the future as it has been during the last sixty years.

As to leadership, an entire readjustment is needed. Most of the leaders among the regular Republicans and among the Progressives were so completely defeated in the election, and such antagonism was aroused by the political family quarrel, that the rank and file of both factions, who desire the future success of the party, will turn anxiously to new leaders who may be acceptable to all members of all factions.

The Republicans look upon Mr. Roosevelt as an unsafe and dangerous leader since he has given way to his third term ambitions and since he has been advocating the radical measures which were once advocated by the Populists, free silver Democrats, Socialists and other radical parties. Since his refusal at Chicago to agree with President Taft to step aside and let a third man be nominated at the Republican Convention, a man like Hadley, Borah, or Cummins, who would have been acceptable to all factions, the Republicans have looked upon Roosevelt as guided more by his personal ambition than by his desire to further the principles which he proclaimed so loudly.

On the other hand the Progressives are equally dissatisfied with President Taft. They look upon him as an ultra-conservative and as a man who failed to keep pace with the progressive ideas of the country because he has not gone to the radical extremes which the new party demanded. Whatever the regular Republicans may think of President Taft and his administration, it is clear that he will not be acceptable for the leadership of a reunited party any more than Mr. Roosevelt is. Neither one of these men can ever hope to lead a reunited party in opposition to the Democrats. New leaders must be found if the division in the Republican party is to be healed and the factions are to be united in the common cause in which they have fought side by side for the last sixty years.

Governor Hadley, of Missouri, took the right position before the election when he announced that he believed in the really progressive principles though not in the extreme radical ideas, but he believed these principles could be worked out best through the Republican organization which holds so large a place in the history of the country. A spirit of conciliation and of fairness on the part of all toward all will bring the solution of the problem and a reuniting of forces, without which there can never be hope for a political victory.

Gentlemen:

The prints which you sent us a few days ago, which were submitted in the contest of your amateur club, have been carefully examined by a committee chosen in this office, and we are today making our decision. It has been very difficult for us to make a choice of the first and second best prints, because, taken as a whole we believe the prints submitted have attained to a high standard of excellence.

There are several others, indeed, which we considered for first and second places in the competition, but after considerable deliberation, we have fixed upon the two sent you today.

We wish to congratulate the members of your club on the ability as photographers displayed by them in this contest.

Yours very truly,

IN REFORM SCHOOL

Five Boys From This County Are At Plainfield.

The report of Guy C. Hanna, superintendent of the Indiana Boys' School at Plainfield which has been filed with Governor Marshall shows that there are five boys in that school from this county. There were 744 boys at the school during the past six months, and the total amount paid for maintenance was $49,422.24.

Fourteen counties have no representation in the school. From Marion county 142 boys were sent to the institution, which was the highest number from any one county in the state. Jackson county paid $209.77 towards maintaining the institution.

Notice.

There will be regular choir practice tonight at 7:30 at the Christian church. Prof. Watson will be present and will have charge of the music. All singers who will assist in the big chorus choir during the revival are requested to be there tonight.

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY. Hosea 7

GOLDEN TEXT:—Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them!—Isa. 5:11.

I am in doubt about this chapter being the one assigned for the world's temperance Sunday, but it is the one on the printed slip of lessons for the year, and we will find a profitable study by taking some statements from the whole book, which we must consider in order to understand this chapter. There being no memory verse, I have suggested verse 2, because our great failure as well as theirs is that we do not consider Isa. 1, 3; v. 12; xlv. 19; Mark vi. 52. As to our own doings, they are the great hindrance and keep so many from turning to God (Hos. v. 4, and margin). As to the king, made glad by lies and wickedness, joining hands with scorners and giving himself bottles of wine (verses 3-7). Ahaz would fill the bill perfectly (II Chron. xxviii, 1-4, 19). Pride, drunkenness, rebellion against God, giving strength to strangers and unconscious but manifest physical failure (verses 8, 10, 13, 14) are some characteristics of the drunkard set forth in these verses.

In verses 11, 16, we see reliance upon human help instead of upon God, and we are reminded of the many cures for drunkenness tried in homes for inebriates, when there is only One that can really deliver. He is always ready to have mercy and may be heard saying to the drunkard and to every sinner, "Thou hast destroyed thyself, but in Me is thine help" (vi. 6; xlii, 9). Israel, here called Ephraim, is spoken of in many ways and by many figures regarding their turning away from the Lord, and these words are true also of all sinners: "Destroyed for lack of knowledge, forgotten the law of God, left off to take heed to the Lord, have sown the wind and shall reap the whirlwind, have plowed wickedness and shall reap iniquity" (iv. 6, 10; vii, 7; x, 13). The cry of the Lord to the wandering ones to return to Him is heard in such words as these: "Return unto the Lord thy God, for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. Take with you words and turn to the Lord. . . . I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely" (xlv, 1, 2, 4).

Two remarkable figures describing the professed people of God in their wanderings from Him are, "A cake not turned," "An empty vine bringing forth fruit unto himself" (vii, 8; x, 1), suggesting the life that is right outwardly, but wrong on the other side, and also the life which seeks only its own happiness. Drunkards, opium fiends and such like are, of all people, apt to be the most selfish and unreasonable and rebellious, counting all others foolish and mad, joined to their idols, and desiring to be let alone (ix, 7; iv, 16). Yet for even such there is deliverance if they will only turn to the Lord. Prophecy has become to me a fascinating study since I began to receive it as a light shining in a dark place—the words of the Holy Spirit by holy men, that we might know what God is doing and is going to do, written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope (II Pet. i, 19-21; Amos iii, 7; Rom. xv, 4; since I have also found that He, Jesus Christ Himself, and His people Israel are the center of all the prophecy and that everywhere His and their glorious future is predicted as bringing blessing to the whole world (Acts x, 43; Rev. xix, 10; Isa. ix, 1-3; xlii, 1-3). In all prophecy He tells Israel plainly their sins, rebukes them, pleads with them, chastens them, but always tells of a glorious future, when they shall see evil no more, after they shall have truly repented and received their Messiah.

We might not have thought that Hos. xi, 1, had any reference to Christ, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him and called my Son out of Egypt," if we had not read it in Matt. ii, 15. But everywhere there are such plain or hidden references to Him. See His and their glorious resurrection in chapter vi, 2, 3: "After two days will He revive us, in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight. . . . His going forth is prepared as the morning."

In the revised version that last clause is "sure as the morning." Rotherham translates it, "Like the dawn is His coming forth assured." And another translates it, "His coming is as certain as the dawn." It is perfectly in accordance with Hab. ii, 3; Heb. x, 37. "Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry." "For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come and will not tarry." In the context of these two and in two other places we have the four times repeated saying, "The just shall live by faith" (Hab. ii, 4; Rom. i, 17; Gal. iii, 11; Heb. x, 38). May we follow on diligently to know the Lord until we see Him face to face.

The words in Hos. xlii, 14, concerning death and the grave take us to Isa. xxv, 8, 9, and on to I Cor. xv, 26, 54, 55; Rev. xxi, 4, when the last enemy, death, shall be destroyed and from such words as these I feel authorized to say that God hates death. What more important word could we have for our souls than Hos. xli, 6: "Turn thou to thy God. Keep mercy and judgment and wait on the God continually." The message is not Hosea's, but the word of the Lord by Hosea, who was contemporary with Isaiah (Hos. i, 1, 2).

THE LESSON QUIZ.

[Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.]

World's Temperance Sunday. Hosea vii.

Golden Text—Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning that they may follow strong drink, that tarry late into the night till wine inflame them!—Isa. v, 11.

(1.) Verses 1-2—Why cannot a nation nor an individual be mortally healed as long as wrongdoing is continued?

(2.) If a government is corrupt and the teachers of the nation false to their trust what will be the condition of the people?

(3.) Would men in authority act corruptly if they actually realized that God took notice of their every wicked way?

(4.) What effect does continued wrongdoing have upon the judgment of the sinner, upon his own acts?

(5.) Verse 3—How fares the nation when the king, the president, the governor, the judge or others in high authority have been subtly blinded by "graft" or influenced by wine?

(6.) Verse 4—When lust and anger burn in a man until his whole life is "leavened" what is the influence of such a life and what will be the man's future?

(7.) Verse 5—What is the difference in the effect of "wine" upon the "king" and upon the plebeian?

(8.) What is the general effect of drinking wine at banquets and other similar functions?

(9.) At what stage in wine drinking does an ordinarily decent man join "his hand with the scorners?"

(11.) When men "lie in wait" to do some devilish thing and drink while they wait what effect does the drink have upon them?

(12.) Verse 7—When men are "hot" with wine is it ever a burning desire to do good? Give your reasons. (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(13.) When we find men "hot" with rebellion against good judges and good government, to which class do they generally belong, total abstainers or drinkers? Why?

(14.) In these days how many good God fearing men use wine as a beverage?

(15.) Verse 8—When professed Christians consort with the wicked what will be the inevitable result, and why?

(16.) What kind of man is he who compares with "a cake not turned," that is burned on one side and half raw on the other?

(17.) Verses 9-10—What proportion of drinkers are so fuddled that they are unconscious of loss and cannot see danger?

(18.) When men or women are besotted with pride what hope is there for them?

(19.) Verses 11-13—What were the results when God's ancient people relied upon other nations for help when God had promised them all the help they needed?

(20.) Verses 14-16—How is it that when men have brought great suffering upon themselves by sin they still insist upon rebelling against God?

EXPLOSIONS BEGAN WITH "OPEN SHOP"

This Is the Evidence Brought Out In Dynamite Trial.

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—In the dynamiting cases Superintendent Trower of the Pittsburgh Construction Company was a witness and gave accounts of depredations against his company. Prior to the time the construction company began to run an "open shop," Trower testified, there were no explosions, but in 1906, he said, when the company was running an "open shop," there were a number. In Cleveland, at the B. & O. viaduct, oil was poured on 5,000 or 6,000 feet of rope belonging to the company, and this was set on fire. About the same time a derrick car being used at another job was dynamited. Trower also testified regarding three explosions directed against the Cincinnati Southern viaduct at Cincinnati, in 1909. Ed Clark, who has pleaded guilty, was about this work frequently, said Trower, seeking to get the company to employ union men only. Witness said: "I asked Clark if that would stop the dynamiting. He hesitated for a while and then said he could not say."

Witness gave a list of depredations against his company, which included an explosion at Newark, N. J., and one in New York city, in addition to those in Cleveland and Cincinnati.

May 14 Charles Wachmeister wrote to McNamara, giving a list of "unfair work" in Detroit investigated by him. He said: "McClintock and Marshall have the viaduct on new depot, but as much as I can find out they have not got the depot part."

May 2 Ryan wrote to McNamara that he had looked over the Pennsylvania Steel company's job at the extreme west end of the Broadway subway in New York, and that the erection of steel was just starting. This work was dynamited May 24, 1910. In this letter Ryan said Hockin might run out to Kansas City and see what could be done there through a committee. "I am skeptical about its effectiveness," wrote Ryan.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY INDICTS "BIG SMOKE"

Jack Johnson Charged With Being White Slaver.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—On a charge of violating the Mann white slave act, the federal grand jury has indicted Pugilist Jack Johnson. The indictment charges Johnson with bringing a girl named Bell Schrieber from Pittsburg to Chicago for unlawful purposes.

Lucille Cameron and several of Johnson's employees were witnesses before the grand jury. It is now probable that the Cameron girl, who has been held as a witness in default of $25,000 bonds, will be released, and that she will return to her home in Minneapolis with her mother, with whom she has become reconciled.

Johnson was subsequently released on $30,000 bail.

Supreme Court Reverses Lower Court in the Fritz Case.

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—John Fritz, who killed his guard in the Jeffersonville reformatory Nov. 21, 1911, is to have a new trial. The supreme court has reversed the Clark circuit court for giving an instruction regarding the weight of evidence which would have allowed the jury to convict Fritz if the jury thought such evidence showed Fritz was sane when he committed the crime, instead of instructing it should show beyond a reasonable doubt that he was sane.

The lower court is reversed with an order for a new trial and Fritz is ordered back from Michigan City to Jeffersonville reformatory to be again tried for murder.

District Attorney Whitman will use many of the witnesses who appeared at Becker's trial and probably all the informers will be called to testify.

The gunmen will probably take the stand. That any of them will turn "informer" the district attorney regards as unlikely. If they go to the electric chair he thinks they will take whatever secrets they have with them.

Specific Blood Poison

Everyone realizes that this disease is a blood infection of the most powerful nature, the virus of which so thoroughly poisons the corpuscles of the circulation that its symptoms are manifested over almost the entire body. First comes a tiny sore or pimple, then the mouth and throat ulcerate, glands in the groin swell, the hair begins to fall out, skin diseases break out on the body, and even the bones ache with rheumatic pains. Only a real blood purifier can have any curative effect on a blood poison so powerful as this. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers; it goes into the circulation and by thoroughly cleansing the blood of every particle of the insidious virus makes a permanent and lasting cure of Specific Blood Poison. If you are suffering with this disease S. S. S. will cure you because it will purify your blood and enrich its health-promoting corpuscles. S. S. S. is so absolutely safe and certain in its results, that everyone may cure themselves at home and be assured the cure will be permanent and lasting. S. S. CHAPTER VIII. A Straight Tip.

NAN received the announcement of Bivens' failure to settle Woodman's suit with a grim resolution to win now, at all hazards. The sensational reports of Stuart's action against the big financiers had given her quick mind the cue to a new line of stratagem. She began cautiously.

"You are not going to give up a thing I've set my heart on merely because old Woodman's a fool, are you?" she asked her husband, with a touch of scorn. "Jim Stuart is the best friend you ever had. He has become one of the most famous men in America. I want him at our next entertainment."

"The thing that puzzles me," Bivens broke in, "is why he will not come to the house. When I meet him down town he's always friendly."

Nan's lips quivered with a queer little smile.

"Will he succeed in this action against these men?"

"No; he can't get the facts. If he could he'd shake the foundations of the financial world."

"Why not give the facts to him?"

"I had thought of that, but it might bring on a panic."

"What have you to lose by it?"

"Nothing, but a panic's a dangerous thing to monkey with."

"It couldn't injure Stuart?" his wife asked cautiously.

"No. It couldn't hurt him. On the other hand, I might make him the unconscious instrument of a great personal vengeance, double my fortune and possibly land Jim in the White House."

"You must do it, dear!" his wife cried, trembling with suppressed excitement.

"It's playing with dynamite."

"It's worth the risk to double your fortune. Do it for my sake!"

Nan leaned close and pressed her husband's hand while her dark eyes found their way into his heart.

"I'll do it," he said with firm accent. "I'll phone him at once."

When Stuart sat down with Bivens in one of the magnificent private dining rooms of his millionaire club two days later he was struck with the perfection of the financier's dress and the easy elegance of his manners.

"Nan has surely done wonders with some pretty crude material!" he mused. He recalled Nan's diary with grim amusement.

It took two years to thoroughly break him so that she could always be sure that his nails were trimmed and his clothes in perfect style. He had long since ceased to struggle and had found much happiness of late years in vying with her in the perfection of his personal appearance.

When the dinner was finished Bivens dismissed the waiter, lighted one of his huge cigars and drew from a morocco case which he had placed beside his chair a typewritten manuscript. He turned its leaves thoughtfully a moment and handed them to Stuart.

"There's a document, Jim, that cost me $10,000 to prepare; for whose suppression $1,000,000 would be paid and no questions asked."

"But why this generosity on your part, Cal?"

"I have anticipated that question. I answer it fully and frankly. There is enough dynamite in that document to blow up half of Wall Street and land somebody in the White House."

"And many in the morgue?"

"And some in the penitentiary. I've watched your work the past nine years with genuine pride, Jim. You've said a lot of hard things about rich malefactors, but you've never touched me."

"No, I think you're too shrewd to be caught in that class, Cal."

"I pride myself that I am. It's only the clumsy fool who gets tangled in the criminal law. But a lot of them have done it—big fellows whose names fill the world with noise. I've taken the pains to put into that typewritten document the names, the dates, the places, the deeds, the names of the witnesses and all the essential facts. Do what you please with it. If you do what I think you will, some men who are wearing purple and fine linen will be wearing stripes before another year and you will be the biggest man in New York."

"And your motive?"

"Perhaps I wish to get even with some men who have done me a dirty trick or two, and perhaps incidentally to the excitement which will follow this exposure of fraud and crime I may make an honest penny. Is that enough?"

"Quite."

"And you'll make the attack at once?"

Stuart glanced rapidly through the first page of the document, and his eyes began to dance with excitement.

"The only favor I ask," Bivens added, "is twenty-four hours' notice before you act."

"I'll let you know."

Stuart rose quickly, placed the document in his inside pocket and hurried home.

The deeper the young lawyer probed into the mass of corruption Bivens had placed in his hands the more profound became his surprise. That men whose names were the synonyms of honesty and fair dealing, men intrusted with the management of companies whose assets represented the savings of millions of poor men, the sole defense of millions of helpless women and children—that these trusted leaders of the world were habitually prostituting their trusts for personal gain, staggered belief.

He delayed action and began a careful, patient, thorough investigation. As it proceeded his amazement increased. He found that Bivens had only scratched the surface of the truth.

New York, the financial center of the nation, had gone mad with the insane passion for money at all hazards—by all means, fair or foul. The nation was on the tidal wave of the most wonderful industrial boom in its history. The price of stocks had reached fabulous figures and still soared to greater heights. Millionaires were springing up like mushrooms, in a night.

Two months had passed since Bivens placed in the district attorney's hands the document which was destined to make sad history in the annals of the metropolis. Stuart felt that the time had come to act. It was his solemn duty to the people.

He sat in his private office in one of the great skyscrapers downtown holding in his hand a list of the men he was about to ask the grand jury to indict for crimes which would send them to prison, exile and dishonored death.

"I've got to do it—that's all. But before I do, I'm going to know one or two things beyond the shadow of a doubt."

He seized his telephone and made an appointment to call at once on Bivens.

The financier extended his delicate hand and with a cordial smile led Stuart to a seat beside his desk. The only sign he betrayed of deep emotion was the ice like coldness of his slender fingers.

"Well, Jim, you've completed your very thorough investigation?"

"How did you know I was making a thorough investigation?"

"I make it my business to know things which vitally interest me. You found my facts accurate, and you are ready to strike?"

"When I have confirmed some statements you have made in your story

trust company?"

"You don't suppose I would make a statement like that unless I know it to be true?"

"How did you discover it?"

"Very simply."

Bivens stepped to one of the great steel safes and drew out a manuscript notebook of some 300 pages of typewritten matter. On the back of the morocco cover was printed in plain gold lettering: "The Private Life of No. 560."

He handed the volume to Stuart, closed the safe and resumed his seat.

"You may take that book with you, Jim," he said quietly. "I trust to your honor not to reveal its contents except in the discharge of your sworn duty as an officer of the law. You will find in it the record of the distinguished president's private life for the past ten years without the omission of a single event of any importance."

Stuart glanced through the book with amazement.

"How did you come into possession of such facts?"

"No trouble at all," was the easy answer. "It only requires a little money and a little patience and a little care in selecting the right men for the right job. Any man in the business world who thinks he can do as he pleases in this town will wake some morning with a decided jolt. The war for financial supremacy has developed a secret service which approaches perfection. Not only do I systematically watch my employees until I know every crook and turn of their lives, but I watch with even greater care the heads of every rival firm in every department of the industrial world where my interests touch theirs."

"I not only watch the heads of firms; I watch their trusted assistants and confidential men. In that big safe—thousand secrets lie locked whose revelation would furnish matter enough to run the yellow journals for the next five years. Modern business is war, the fiercest and most cruel the world has ever known. It is of greater importance to a modern captain of industry to know the plans of his enemy than it ever was to the commanding general of an opposing army."

"I see," Stuart responded thoughtfully.

"There are men down there in the street now," Bivens went on dreamily, "who are tearing silk hats today for whom the prison tailor is cutting a suit. I have their records in that silent little steel clad room. It's a pitiful thing but it's life."

"The scariest thing in New York today, Jim, is the man who can't be bought and sold. The thing that's beyond price in the business world is character—combined with brains. That's why I made you the offer I did once upon a time to come in with me. There are positions today in New York with a salary of half a million a year waiting for men who can fill them. If I could find one man of the highest order of creative and executive ability who would stand by me in my enterprises I could be the richest man in the world in ten years."

Stuart lifted his eyes from the record he was casually scanning and smiled into Bivens' dark, serious face.

The look silenced the speaker. The little man knew instinctively that Stuart was at that moment weighing his own life and character by the merciless standard he had set up for others. Judged by conventional laws, he had nothing to fear. He was a faithful member of his church. He gave liberally to its work and gave generously to a hundred worthy charities. He loved his wife with old fashioned loyalty and tenderness and grieved that she was childless. He stood by his friends and fought his enemies, asking no quarter and giving none.

Yet in his heart of hearts he knew that, however loftily he might discourse at present about "character," "honor," "integrity" and "fair dealing," he had stolen the formula from his big hearted employer, Woodman, with which he had laid the foundation of his fortune. It was the first half million that came hard. It was this first half million that bore the stain of shame.

His other questionable acts on which the fate of millions had often hung he had no difficulty in justifying. Business was war.

Bivens waited for Stuart to speak. The moment was one big with fate. Stuart was about to reach a decision that would make history. No one knew so well its importance as the keen intellect that gleamed behind the little black eyes watching with tireless patience. Below he could hear the roar of the city's life. Men bought and sold with no fear of tomorrow. Yet a single word from the lips of the tall, clean shaven young officer of the law and a storm would break which might tear from the foundations institutions on whose solidity modern civilization seemed to rest.

"Well, Jim," Bivens said at length, "you are going to act?"

Stuart rose abruptly, his reply sharp and clear:

"Yes, I'm going to act."

"At once?"

"It's my duty."

Bivens grasped his hand.

"I congratulate you, Jim. You are going to do a big thing, one of the biggest things in our history. You are going to teach the mighty that the law is mightier. It ought to land you at the very top in politics or any other old place you'd like to climb."

"That's something which doesn't interest me yet, Cal. The thing that stuns me is that I've got to do so painful a thing. But my business is the enforcement of justice. There's one thing I still can't understand—why you of all men on earth should have put this information in my hands. The honor of the achievement, if good shall come to the country, is really yours."

concerning the private life of these men. How do you know the accuracy of the facts you state in a single line, for instance, about the private life and habits of the president of a certain

trust company?"

"You don't suppose I would make a statement like that unless I know it to be true?"

"How did you discover it?"

"Very simply."

Bivens stepped to one of the great steel safes and drew out a manuscript notebook of some 300 pages of typewritten matter. On the back of the morocco cover was printed in plain gold lettering: "The Private Life of No. 560."

He handed the volume to Stuart, closed the safe and resumed his seat.

"You may take that book with you, Jim," he said quietly. "I trust to your honor not to reveal its contents except in the discharge of your sworn duty as an officer of the law. You will find in it the record of the distinguished president's private life for the past ten years without the omission of a single event of any importance."

Stuart glanced through the book with amazement.

"How did you come into possession of such facts?"

"No trouble at all," was the easy answer. "It only requires a little money and a little patience and a little care in selecting the right men for the right job. Any man in the business world who thinks he can do as he pleases in this town will wake some morning with a decided jolt. The war for financial supremacy has developed a secret service which approaches perfection. Not only do I systematically watch my employees until I know every crook and turn of their lives, but I watch with even greater care the heads of every rival firm in every department of the industrial world where my interests touch theirs."

"I not only watch the heads of firms; I watch their trusted assistants and confidential men. In that big safe—thousand secrets lie locked whose revelation would furnish matter enough to run the yellow journals for the next five years. Modern business is war, the fiercest and most cruel the world has ever known. It is of greater importance to a modern captain of industry to know the plans of his enemy than it ever was to the commanding general of an opposing army."

"I see," Stuart responded thoughtfully.

"There are men down there in the street now," Bivens went on dreamily, "who are tearing silk hats today for whom the prison tailor is cutting a suit. I have their records in that silent little steel clad room. It's a pitiful thing but it's life."

"The scariest thing in New York today, Jim, is the man who can't be bought and sold. The thing that's beyond price in the business world is character—combined with brains. That's why I made you the offer I did once upon a time to come in with me. There are positions today in New York with a salary of half a million a year waiting for men who can fill them. If I could find one man of the highest order of creative and executive ability who would stand by me in my enterprises I could be the richest man in the world in ten years."

Stuart lifted his eyes from the record he was casually scanning and smiled into Bivens' dark, serious face.

The look silenced the speaker. The little man knew instinctively that Stuart was at that moment weighing his own life and character by the merciless standard he had set up for others. Judged by conventional laws, he had nothing to fear. He was a faithful member of his church. He gave liberally to its work and gave generously to a hundred worthy charities. He loved his wife with old fashioned loyalty and tenderness and grieved that she was childless. He stood by his friends and fought his enemies, asking no quarter and giving none.

Yet in his heart of hearts he knew that, however loftily he might discourse at present about "character," "honor," "integrity" and "fair dealing," he had stolen the formula from his big hearted employer, Woodman, with which he had laid the foundation of his fortune. It was the first half million that came hard. It was this first half million that bore the stain of shame.

His other questionable acts on which the fate of millions had often hung he had no difficulty in justifying. Business was war.

Bivens waited for Stuart to speak. The moment was one big with fate. Stuart was about to reach a decision that would make history. No one knew so well its importance as the keen intellect that gleamed behind the little black eyes watching with tireless patience. Below he could hear the roar of the city's life. Men bought and sold with no fear of tomorrow. Yet a single word from the lips of the tall, clean shaven young officer of the law and a storm would break which might tear from the foundations institutions on whose solidity modern civilization seemed to rest.

"Well, Jim," Bivens said at length, "you are going to act?"

Stuart rose abruptly, his reply sharp and clear:

"Yes, I'm going to act."

"At once?"

"It's my duty."

Bivens grasped his hand.

"I congratulate you, Jim. You are going to do a big thing, one of the biggest things in our history. You are going to teach the mighty that the law is mightier. It ought to land you at the very top in politics or any other old place you'd like to climb."

"That's something which doesn't interest me yet, Cal. The thing that stuns me is that I've got to do so painful a thing. But my business is the enforcement of justice. not mine."

"And you can't conceive of my acting for the country's good?"

Bivens' black eyes twinkled.

"Not by the wildest leap of my imagination."

The twinkle broadened into a smile as the lawyer continued:

"Your code is simple, Cal. There's no provision in it for disinterested effort for others. This time you've got me up a tree. You have rendered the people a great service. You have placed me under personal obligations. But how you are going to get anything out of it is beyond me."

"Oh, I'll have my reward, my boy," Bivens answered jocularly, as his dainty fingers again stroked his beard, pressing his mustache back from the thin lips, "and I assure you it will not be purely spiritual."

The door had scarcely closed on Stuart when Bivens pressed the button which called his confidential secretary.

In a moment the man stood at his elbow with the tense erect bearing of an orderly on the field of battle. The quick nervous touch of the master's hand on that button had told to his sensitive ears the story of a coming life and death struggle. His words came with sharp, nervous energy:

"Yes, sir?"

"A meeting of the Allied Bankers here in thirty minutes. No telephone messages. A personal summons to each. They enter one at a time that no one on the outside sees them come."

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER HAS REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

I have been thinking that a word from me would benefit those who may be suffering as I was before I began taking your Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. I am a locomotive engineer, employed on the Tyrone & Clearfield Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Three years ago I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble so bad that I was compelled to lay off duty from my engine and was in the care of two doctors. However their medicine did not benefit me. One day, I noticed your advertisement, to send name and address for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. At this time my trouble had reached a serious stage. I sent for the sample bottle and in three days received a small bottle of Swamp-Root, which I took according to directions, and by the time I had taken the contents, I could pass water more freely. I was so pleased with my experiment that I sent my wife to the drug store of W. H. Milick, Philipsburg, Pa., and secured a one-dollar bottle. I continued taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root until I was entirely cured. Now whenever I feel any pain or soreness after being exposed to bad weather or hard work, I take a dose or two of Swamp-Root. I cannot recommend this remedy too highly, especially to brother engineers who are more or less troubled with their kidneys (more than any other class of men.)

Yours truly,
T. J. VAN SCOYOC,
1206 Lincoln Ave., State of Pennsylvania, County of Blair, ss.

Personally appeared before me, a Notary Public, T. J. Van Scoyoc, who being duly sworn, doth depose and say that the foregoing statement is true. Sworn and subscribed to before me this 15th day of July, A. D., 1909.

Helps a Judge in Bad Fix.

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and had long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote. "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

BIGGER PROFITS

Spraying can no longer be considered by the up-to-date farmer or grower as an expense. It is rather an investment.

The man who sprays his orchard systematically, and with proper materials, is sure to have a larger crop and more perfect fruit than the man who does not spray.

KIBLER'S Lime-Sulphur Solution

Is a universal fungicide and insecticide for destroying San Jose Scale and other sucking insects and mites. As a fall spray, it should be used ten days after the leaves have dropped and as a spring spray it should be applied just before the trees come out of their dormant state.

The spring spraying is effective against the Peach leaf-curl as well as the scale. The proper use of this solution, at the right time, will increase the proportion of perfect fruit in your crops many times.

We have the Lime-Sulphur solution you want.

LARGE FUNERAL

Many Attended Services Over Body of Late Hugh A. Burrell.

The funeral services of the late Hugh A. Burrell, who died early Thursday morning, were held this afternoon from the residence of Frank Brannan at Brownstown, and were very largely attended. The Rev. L. V. Rule, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated.

Among those who attended the funeral were many of the old friends of the deceased whom he had befriended in earlier years. Mr. Burrell had always lived near Brownstown and had a very wide acquaintance. The floral offerings were beautiful and were sent from many of his friends.
